Seven counties participate in 5K Fun Run/Walk

Walkers and runners from seven counties participated in Three Rivers District Health Department Pendleton County Health Center's 4th Annual 5K Fun Run/Walk.

First place with a time of 18 minutes 45 seconds went to Corry Hudnell. Sharon Hartung came in second running the course in 24 minutes 36 seconds and, third place went to Wayne Henges with a time of 25 minutes 28 seconds.

There were medal winners in eleven different age divisions. All participants received a commemorative t-shirt with health tips and race sponsors listed on the back. Fourteen lucky participants won over $300 in donated prizes.

Three Rivers District Health Department thanks the Pendleton County School System for use of the Middle School as a staging area for the race. And, special thanks to all our sponsors, Thaxton's Canoe Trails, Owen Electric, Gallatin Steel, D & C Diesel, US Bank, The Butler Market, BB's Falmouth, The Falmouth Outlook, Edwardo's Pizza, Abracadabra Graphics, and Pendleton County Fiscal Court.

Residents be aware of traffic notices for I-471 and KY 22

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet District 6 would like the public to be aware of the following conditions and/or operations that are being reported for highways in District Six. Motorists should be aware of the possible delays or lane closures on the following projects:

I-471 north bound from the US 27 to the Daniel Carter Beard Bridge/Ohio River in Campbell County - traffic is currently in a shifted pattern with both shoulders closed, restricted to two lanes from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. with three lanes available during peak traffic periods, restricted to one lane from the intersection at US 27 in Highland Heights to just north of the interchange with I-275, use caution when entering the work zone and watch for slowed traffic.

KY 22 (bridge replacement over the Licking River) - a major bridge replacement has begun on KY 22 between KY 159 and the Licking River. Watch for work crews as construction continues. Further updates will be provided as the work progresses throughout the year.

For the latest up-to-date information on road conditions throughout Kentucky motorists can dial 511.

Slow down, our moms and dads work here!

National Work Zone Safety Week is APRIL 23 - 27

A split second of driver distraction can turn a highway work zone into a death zone.

Each year, over 40,000 people in the United States - moms, dads, sons and daughters - are injured in highway work zones, and hundreds are killed. The average is a death every 13 hours and hundreds of injuries every 13 minutes.

The past three years in Kentucky, 16 people died and 285 people were injured in highway construction and maintenance work zones. That underscores the importance of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet's work zone safety campaign April 23 - 27, in conjunction with National Work Zone Safety Week. The cabinet is hosting events across the state See ZONE Page 11

Pendleton County Conservation District recognizes Person of the Year

At their annual Conservation Awards Banquet the Pendleton County Conservation District honored the 2011-2012 Conservation Person of the Year, Teri Brown. This annual award recognizes farmers who are taking the initiative to implement sound, innovative and cost effective conservation techniques and the best management practices on their farms.

Teri applied for and received Environmental Quality Incentive Program (EQIP) funds to assist her in installing a fence to protect the water quality and banks of the creek bordering her property. She also applied for and received assistance to install a stream crossing and watering facilities to furnish her cattle with a dependable supply of fresh drinking water.

Teri has also fenced the cattle out of a wooded area on her farm with EQIP program assistance. Restricting the cattle's access to the forest protects the underlying soils from erosion and the tree roots from damaged caused by cattle trails.

Teri has also installed a heavy use area to help prevent soil erosion and to create a more healthy feeding environment during winter feeding.

Teri is currently working on a pasture and hay land planting through the EQIP Program which will improve her hay field's forage conditions, increase her hay production and help lower her annual cost of cattle feeding.

All of Teri's conservation practices have been installed on schedule and up to program specifications and she is always a pleasure to work with. Congratulations, Teri Brown.

Conservation District's Teacher of the Year for 2012

This year's Conservation Teacher of the Year has been teaching for 25 years. She taught in the Silver Grove School system for five years and then came to Pendleton County High School, where she has been ever since. In those years she has taught environmental science, anatomy, biology and advanced placement biology. Science classes take a lot of preparation and for many years she has had to prepare for 3-4 different classes which takes a tremendous amount of organization and preparation.

She has helped train many new teachers so that they too could teach the many concepts of science. She has also empowered thousands of students with the knowledge of science.

She is a very positive person on the faculty and is always looking for ways to make her students and faculty think. For example, at the bottom of her e-mails she writes "Remember the third pig, he was prepared and built his house of brick, pigs one and two were unprepared and built their homes of straw and sticks. They were eaten by the wolf." I am not sure if she is trying to promote living in brick houses or if she is against the release of wolves in the west or if she is trying to encourage the teachers to have lesson plans prepared and ready to go.

This year, Teri Zeigler, is Pendleton County Conservation District's Teacher of the Year. Congratulations!

KSP and DEA help resident dispose of old medicine

Kentucky State Police (KSP) will partner with the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) on Saturday, April 28, 2012 in a collaborative effort to remove potentially dangerous controlled substances from home medicine cabinets. This is the fourth national DEA 'Take Back' initiative the agency has participated in. KSP collected over 1,000 pounds of prescription drugs during previous 'Take Back' programs. Collection activities will take place from 10 a.m. through 2 p.m. at See MEDICINE Page 11

Waist management program promotes being healthy

Pendleton County Cooperative Extension, Three Rivers District Health Department, Northern Elementary, Phillip Sharp Middle School and Tone and Tan Zumba partnered to provide a unique waist management program. Waist management's goal is to encourage healthy lifestyle choices that lead to increased energy, increased physical activity, better sleep patterns, self esteem, and improved body image that includes weight management. Participants earned points for percentage of weight loss and for engaging in healthy lifestyle activities that included physical activity, drinking more water, eating more fruits and vegetables, and more. There were special gifts and prizes at See WAIST Page 9

These Flip Flops brighten your day but aren't for your feet

A STANDARD USE FOR THE FLIP FLOP FLOWER POT

By Lisbeth Tanz

I have to admit that when I first read the name of this company Flip Flop Flower Pot, I wondered how they could possibly piece together flip flops to make a flowerpot worthy of holding a plant. Boy, was I strolling down the wrong path!

The idea behind the Flip Flop Flower Pot is its design simplicity. It's several pots, held together by a center pole that allows each pot to "flip" to one side or the other. That's it!

Planting is easy, too, and all you have to remember is to leave one or two inches of space at the top of each pot. This helps prevent watering spills. Speaking of watering, after potting, you can water from the top of the tray or saucer to catch water. The stabilizer bars that go into this pot to fully wet the soil. But after that, you simply pour a slow, steady stream of water into the pole and your plants are watered at the roots. Ask any gardener and you'll learn that root watering is best for plants anyway.

Some creative customers have found other uses for this unique flow-erpot system. One used baskets to hold bath towels; another created a beautiful holiday arrangement; still another used the Flip Flop Flower Pot to create an indoor herb garden. While the design may be consistent, the use of the pots is only limited by your imagination!

You can order the Flip Flop Flower Pot directly from the manufacturer through their website, or look for it in your local garden store. If you're in Cincinnati, you can visit their retail location.

What Would You Create?

So now that you know about this cool invention, what would you create? Here are some ideas to stimulate your imagination:

An unusual canned drink server for a party

A toy holder for a child's playroom

A craft tools and supplies holder

A repository for gardening tools (kind of seems obvious, doesn't it?)

A unique light fixture

Now, it's your turn. Leave your suggestions in the comment section below.

Health insurance for your trees and shrubs for yards

Most homeowners with yards enjoy the thought of an inviting landscape they can show off and enjoy. But creating a beautiful outdoor living space takes effort and patience.

"Attempting to force beauty onto trees and shrubs with bad pruning methods and over-zealous spraying for pests is a haphazard approach that results in wasted time and money, with only sickly plants to show for it," says Tchukki Andersen, CTSP*, Board Certified Master Arborist and staff arborist for the Tree Care Industry Association. "A plant health care (PHC) program can take the effort out of your landscape work and give you back the time you envisioned having to enjoy it," she says.

What is plant health care? Plants, and trees especially, are valuable resources to your landscape. As assets, they deserve and require long-term care in order to provide return on your investment. A plant health care protection plan supplies these valuable resources with specialized monitoring and problem-solving methods that can prevent high-cost plant/tree replacement in the long run.

How does this work? The goal of PHC is to maintain tree and plant health in your yard by providing proper growing conditions for the plants. Most health problems associated with trees can be linked to past environmental stress or declining growing conditions. Healthy trees have natural defenses, but when a tree is stressed, it is more vulnerable to harmful insects and diseases.

"PHC technicians work closely with homeowners to reduce those tree stressors and manage pest problems before they become harmful," says Andersen. "Managing plant pests and problems rather than eliminating them offers a pro-active and holistic approach to maintaining tree and shrub health."

There are actually people who do this? A qualified arborist (PHC technician) will make proactive visits to your property to inspect for signs of any plant health problems. Considering your landscape goals, the PHC technician will help guide your plant health regime. Your expectations and concerns about your trees are vital to the success of the PHC program.

What are the treatments?

Managed landscape plants require specialized "treatments," as many living things often do. In the past, landscape pest control treatments were primarily pesticide or fertilizer applications made regularly, whether the plant needed it or not. PHC spray treatments are not necessarily obsolete or "bad" for the environment, if performed by a qualified technician for a specific pest. In fact, some spray treatments may be the best option for clients who have overriding concerns about program cost or are only concerned about one specific pest problem. Nowadays though, good plant health care provides specific treatments at specific times, which better targets pests and reduces waste.

But the best treatment methods are those that work in combination with natural processes or are the least environmentally intrusive. A PHC technician may recommend any one or a combination of the following treatments:

- Maintenance or restoration pruning
- An integrated pest management (IPM) program to deal with any insect and disease issues
- Mulching bare soil beneath tree canopies
- Testing to determine any nutrient deficiencies and a program to address them
- Evaluation of current irrigation practices and a suggested program for correct irrigation cycles
- Planting pest resistant varieties of trees and shrubs specifically suited to your site

But can it help my trees?

Most people want to know what the pest problems or the overall problems are in their landscape. Your PHC provider observes your trees and shrubs for changes in their health, and will work closely with you to devise solutions as needed. A custom-designed PHC program for your trees and shrubs will, over time, provide a beautiful and healthy landscape that the entire neighborhood can enjoy. Also, an aesthetically pleasing landscape adds curb appeal to the value of a home.

Who should I call? Qualified plant health care companies save time and money for homeowners. The Tree Care Industry Association has many professional PHC providers who will tap into a huge reservoir of information and experience to make educated decisions and avoid costly mistakes.

A professional arborist can examine your trees and evaluate your plant care regimen to not only determine the source of an existing problem, but to make recommendations that may eliminate or minimize future difficulties.

Homeowners can contact the Tree Care Industry Association (TCIA), a public and professional resource on trees and arboriculture that was established in 1938. It has more than 2,000 member companies who recognize stringent safety and performance standards, and are required to carry liability insurance. TCIA also has an Accreditation program that requires companies to meet industry standards and qualifications, including ANSI A300 pruning standards. An easy way to find a professional tree care service provider in your area is to use TCIA's "Locate a member company program." You can use this service by calling 1-800-733-2622 or by doing a ZIP code search at www.treecaretips.org.

Editors: If you would like additional information or digital photos, please contact atetreault@tcia.org.

Guide to fertile soil and raised garden beds

By: Jessica Click

Healthy soil is a critical component of any successful garden. By establishing a permanent garden layout in which beds and walking paths remain in place, from year to year, you can minimize soil compaction and create a great garden that's healthy and easy to maintain. Soil needs air and water to function, and compaction from foot traffic robs it of both.

Permanent beds can be any size or shape, as long as you can reach into the center while standing in the paths. Edging is optional, although many gardeners like the look of borders such as logs, boards or stones.

Raised beds are a good idea for sites with clay soil or areas with poor drainage. Gardeners who want to extend their growing season to early spring and late fall also benefit from the warming effect produced by raised beds.

Your new permanent garden structure will naturally raise the beds a little higher than the compacted soil of the paths, but you can till the paths and shovel the loose soil onto the beds to raise them even more. Note that your plants will require more water during dry periods if you add more than a few extra inches of soil.

To get started, try one of these three simple bed-building techniques:

Plan A: Till, compost, till. First till the area to kill the grass, then add a few inches of compost or grass clippings and till again. There's bound to be remaining weed seeds in the mix; you can eliminate them by watering the area, then hoeing sprouts as they appear after a week or two. If possible, repeat the water/hoe sequence several times prior to planting.

Plan B: No till. Prep the garden area simply by covering it with cardboard or a few layers of wet newspaper under several inches of grass clippings, leaves, or hay or straw. You can cut holes in the mulch and set out transplants with a little organic fertilizer immediately. You'll want to wait several months to plant seeds, however, to allow the sod to die and the paper to decompose. (For more information on alternatives to tilling, read Build Better Garden Soil.)

Plan C: Instant Beds. Veteran gardener David Cavagnaro uses this method on his Iowa homestead with great results: Arrange bags of topsoil with drainage holes punched in the bottom over the plot, completely covering it. Cut the plastic off the tops of the bags and voila, you're ready to plant your seeds. The plastic bags can be hidden by mulching with grass clippings or leaves. When the season's over, pull away the plastic and turn the topsoil into the ground in preparation for the next year.

Once you've organized your new garden layout, it's a good idea to have your soil tested. Adding the wrong fertilizers or too much of one type can cause permanent damage. The test is often only $10 to $20 and will tell you what amendments, if any, need to be added before you plant.

Finally, don't forget to add compost annually. Even just a thin quarter-inch layer will improve your fertility and your soil's capacity to hold water and fertilizers. This and the reduced compaction made possible by the permanent paths are the keys to maintaining fertile, low-maintenance soil. (Anyone can make their own compost — see Compost Made Easy.)

How to care for hanging plants

An introduction to caring for hanging plants

Hanging plants are a beautiful addition to most any room. They draw the eye up and really showcase the plant, as well as adding an interesting design element. In the strictest sense, growing plants in hanging baskets is the same as growing them in grounded pots. But before you plan an ambitious Babylon of your own, be aware there are several things to consider that will protect your home and make the whole experience easier.

A hanging basket or pot full of wet soil and plant material can be heavy. Before you hang anything from your walls or ceiling, make sure the structure can hold the weight. Do not sink hooks straight into plaster or dry-wall—make sure they are firmly anchored in wall studs or ceiling joists. If you have existing hooks, test them before hanging anything.

Your choice of potting media will also make a difference. Most bagged potting soils are heavy with peat, or composted sphagnum peat, as the primary ingredient. Peat has excellent water retention qualities, but weighs more. If weight is a consideration, reduce the weight of your peat mix by adding perlite. This will also increase drainage, so you'll have to water more often and be more careful not to drip from the basket.

Protecting Your Floors and Furniture

Hanging baskets present multiple opportunities disaster, but probably the most common problem is water drainage. The coconut fiber liners that work so well outside are unsuited for indoor use because water runs straight through them. The two best options for indoor baskets are:

A pot within a pot. This versatile and easy set-up allows you to easily switch out your hanging plants. The outer, decorative basket is completely sealed—no drainage holes at all—and it has chains or rope fastened directly to it for hanging. Place your potted plants inside, and viola, a hanging garden. The major disadvantage here is it may be difficult to reach over the lip of the outside pot while watering, and it is heavier.

The attached tray. This is how most hanging baskets are sold in garden centers. A plastic basket comes with an attached drip trap. The wires or ropes attach to the basket itself. While this is lighter and more economical, the problem is usually the size of the drip tray. Very small trays allow very little room for error. Even a little too much water and you end up muddy water dripping onto your floors.

Watering
No doubt, watering your hanging plants is the hardest part. If you have very large, heavy baskets, you can attach them to simple pulley system that allows the entire basket to be lowered for watering. This, however, is impractical and far more ambitious than most homeowners are. In most cases, a step-ladder and a long-neck watering can will take care of your watering needs. If drainage is a persistent problem, or you have white carpets, it might be a good idea to take the plant outside for its weekly watering, weather permitting.

Remember that air nearer the ceiling tends to warmer and drier than air at the floor, so take this into account. Your hanging plants may need a little more water than your more terrestrial plants.

Organic Herb gardening tips

THE ALLURE OF HERBS

Many things come to mind when we think of growing and using herbs. For example, the spicy and piney scent of rosemary growing in the garden, a steaming hot cup of mint tea, an aromatic bath with lavender, or a delicious Italian meal with lots of oregano and garlic.

If you've ever come down with a cold and wanted to naturally boost your immune system, you've probably relied on herbs such as Echinacea or Goldenseal. Additionally, many herbs can be used as coloring agents, cosmetics, and natural room deodorizers. Not to mention that the simple act of growing herbs in your home or garden is a relaxing and rewarding experience.

THE SECRET TO ORGANIC HERB GARDENING

People have been growing herbs organically for centuries. It is only recently with the advent of chemical pesticides and herbicides that we've lost this knowledge and have chosen the convenience of chemicals. Traditionally, herbs were harvested in the wild from their native habitats and then later they were domesticated to be grown in gardens.

So really, the secret to successful organic herb gardening, or organic gardening of any kind, is to understand how nature works and how these plants grow in their natural setting. If we try to approximate the environment in which plants grow in the wild, we will have a healthier and more natural garden.

The secret to successful gardening is rich, fertile soil. If you aren't already composting, start now! Use a compost bin to turn your yard waste and kitchen scraps into compost, the "black gold" of gardening.

April 24, 1954: "Billboard" magazine headlined a change to come about in the music biz. The headline read, "Teenagers Demand Music with a Beat -- Spur Rhythm and Blues." Within a year R&B music, by both black and white artists, caught the public's fancy.

Pin Money: How Pinterest Helps You Spend Less and Enjoy More

By Ross Kenneth Urken
So far, Pinterest has saved Jo Ann Davidson a bundle. Thanks to the social photo- and idea-sharing website, she was able to redo her family room for a pittance. She made two pillow covers from $20 clearance-priced fabric, redecorated her mantel with repurposed crafts, replaced heavy winter drapes with airy sheers bought at $5 a panel, and added $3 worth of ribbon trim to her existing lamp shades. Overall, the DIY choices the site inspired cost a fraction of what buying new retail furnishings would have. And that's just the tip of the iceberg.

The recession and our slow recovery have helped to spur a nationwide trend toward thrift and reuse, and there's no place that exemplifies that quite like Pinterest, where Davidson got her crafty ideas. The much-buzzed-about social networking site functions as a digital cork-board where people can manage theme-based image collections, categorized by interests and hobbies. Users "pin" pictures to concept-specific boards to create a hodge-podge of ideas and collective creativity.

And while Pinterest may not be a panacea for all of your financial ailments, it can certainly help you cut down on your expenses.

"I have found Pinterest to be quite a money saver by repurposing items I already have and also making my home more personal using items that mean something to me," Davidson said. "For example, I used an old frame I had, spray painted it, covered it with burlap ... added a lace doily from the antique store ($3) and attached an old skeleton key from the home where I grew up. This item is priceless. The key reminds me of my childhood. I couldn't find this anywhere else."

Her biggest money-saving moves are yet to come. She's converting her grown daughter's bedroom into a guest room using ideas from Pinterest. She was unsuccessful at selling the childhood bedroom furniture, but instead of giving it a full-on renovation, she's giving it a "Pin-lift." She figures this will save her about $1,000.

The Rise of the Pinthusiasts
Of course, there are all kinds of money-saving and life-hacking sites out there, but none offer quite the same blend of appealing eye candy and infectious social influence as Pinterest.

Instead of dining out, Pinterest inspires people to try out new recipes. Instead of buying new outfits, they might try to renew their wardrobes with little twists. It's a militia of the crafty, with everyone sharing ways to save a quick buck.

Christine Luken, a financial counselor and self-described "coupon queen," has taken parsimony to the extreme using DIY tips she's gleaned from Pinterest.

"I would have to find granola bars at $1.25 a box or less to beat the price of homemade," Luken said. "I also found some great 'recipes' for making my own cleaning products for pennies on the dollar. My favorite is the homemade dishwasher detergent that only costs 8 cents per load and works as well as the Cascade I typically buy on sale with coupons."

Isra Huashmi, a blogger at The Frugalette, points to a board called "Food 1 Make," where no meal's ingredients cost more than $10.

"Pinterest has become a fabulous source of inspiration for DIY frugal living families," Hashmi said. "DIY in general is great, but can get expensive with all the add-ons and over-the-top styling you see on HGTV. Pinterest is for real folks at home, living on a limited budget."

It's the interactive element -- the social network's ability for the quick exchange of ideas and images -- that pays off.

"We swap ideas with things we already have in our homes that doesn't require going out to Home Depot and buying all the equipment," Hashmi said.

Upcycling and the DIY Trend
While discounts and deals are ubiquitous online, Pinterest is unusual in its angle of encouraging saving through creativity, and melding it with practical, demonstrated solutions within a like-minded community. And the interactivensess of exchanging tips -- whether about making soufflé or repurposing an old bookshelf -- provides a sort of viral instant gratification.

"The Pinterest community is a source of inspiration for countless things, including how people can be more crafty and thrifty," Pinterest spokeswoman Carolyn Thomas said. "One of the most prominent ways we see people using the service is to search for upcycling/DIY project ideas to reuse things."

"Other thrifty uses for Pinterest ... include pinning comparable products to a specific board for comparison-shopping, and finding homemade alternatives to store-bought products," she said.

The Pinterest community, then, becomes an instant sounding board for creative ideas and purchasing strategies -- a focus group for your whims.

Vanessa Vancouver, a mother in Reno, Nev., is prepared for the birth of her second child, who's due May 30. Rather than buying a new dresser for the baby's room, she turned to Pinterest for ideas.

First, she created a pinboard on the site to brainstorm. Eventually, she found a used dresser on Craigslist for $40, which she repainted in a warm yellow and personalized for the nursery based on the ideas she gathered.

FINANCIAL CORNER

Pinterest

Becca Bijoch of Minneapolis has caught the frugality bug on Pinterest though she wasn't necessarily a bargain-hunter previously. "I'm obsessed with two things: Pinterest and thrifting," Bijoch said. "I use the site at least once a week to cook, get dressed, do a project, get inspiration for something I can make out of thrift-store finds."

She's cleaned her couch with a brush, a sponge and rubbing alcohol, rather than paying $100 to have the task professionally done; collected free glasses and containers to plant her succulents, rather than spending $20 for pots at home décor shops; reorganized her linens; turned tacky brass knickknacks into more valuable chrome beauties; replicated a $400 Tom Binns necklace by buying $20 rhinestone jewelry on the cheap and painting it neon with $3 nail polish; and jazzed up her old IKEA tables with a Pinterest feature called "IKEA hack" -- in this case, buying a $3 four-pack of brass corners.

"Before I became a Pinterest user, I did not cook, like ever," Bijoch said. She used to spend some $20 a day on prepared food -- $600 a month. Now she spends $100 a month on groceries to make recipes she's learned on Pinterest and pockets the savings.

Frugal ... for Now
The recession gave rise to a trend of thriftiness and reuse, according to Lauren Weber, author of In Cheap We Trust -- but trends do run in cycles.

"Suddenly it was cool to be cheap, to get all your material needs met by Freecycle, to make your own laundry detergent and downsize from two cars to one," Weber said. "But if history tells us anything, it's that these frugal interludes tend to be short lived. They're driven by temporary political or economic conditions and they never seem to last, much to the sorrow of dyed-in-the-wool cheap adherents."

"[Frugality] is a part of our mythology," Weber said. "Think Ben Franklin or Thoreau's time at Walden Pond. And this is a mythology we can tap into when it's expedient to do so."

That said, the American love of excess -- our double cheeseburgers, our McMansions, our Hummers -- takes us far from that Puritanical ethos.

"Americans by and large have chosen a different myth and sensibility to project to the world and to themselves -- that we're a nation where bigger is always better and more is never enough-big cars, big houses, big credit card bills," Weber said. "This is a more powerful articulation of the American character right now. However, I'd say that frugality is still present in our national character and it's something we can access when we need to."

As the aftermath of the recession lingers, Pinterest has allowed Americans to tap into that frugal instinct collectively and resist the dominant culture of superfluousness and consumerism.

Resisting the Urge to Spend
Pinterest has also become a hotbed of a sort of spectator consumerism -- people pin items they may love, but decide not to buy in solidarity as savers.

"Lately I've been saying, 'Pinning is the new shopping,'" said Michelle Rigger-Ransom, who runs a communications consultancy in Seattle, Wash. "I find Pinterest satisfies the desire to discover and enjoy beautiful things without stepping foot in a store. This is great because you're not tempted to make impulse purchases as you wander around a physical store."

You can also pin items to come back to later, helping you to avoid being swayed by heat-of-the-moment impulse buys. And boards dedicated to comparison shopping allow you to make your final purchases more thoughtfully considered ones.

Such boards are also useful when shopping for gifts with an eye toward the longer term. If you spot the perfect gift for someone whose birthday is months away, you don't have to buy it now, or forget it -- just stick a pin in it.

"You don't end up buying something last-minute like a plaid Slanket or weird candle," Rigger-Ransom said, "but instead have chosen something that your gift recipient might actually enjoy and find useful."

Some take an even more active approach to prevent unnecessary purchases.

Mona Marimow, who works at online bank PerkStreet, which rewards customers for making financially responsible decisions, has a Pinterest board called "Stuff I Didn't Buy" for the bank's customers to display items they refrained from shelling out for.

One post features an image of an iPhone, with the comment: "Everyone who has an iPhone loves their phone, but unfortunately I can't afford one : (Till I pay off my school loan : -) Sandra." Another, with a pic of a personal jetpack reads, "I need this. I really really do. The Martin Jetpack. My commute to work just sucks, this would just save me soo much time. Oh well I didn't get it, tempted but I resisted."

American icon, Dick Clark, 82, gone but not forgotten

Broadcast icon Dick Clark, the longtime host of the influential "American Bandstand," has died, publicist Paul Shefrin said. He was 82.

Clark suffered a heart attack while at St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica for an outpatient procedure, his publicist said Wednesday. "Attempts to resuscitate were unsuccessful."

The family has not yet decided whether there will be a public memorial service for the multifaceted Clark, although Shefrin said, "There will be no funeral."

Clark suffered what was then described as "a mild stroke" in December 2004, just months after announcing he had been diagnosed with Type 2 diabetes.

That stroke forced Clark to cut back on his on-camera work, including giving up the hosting duties for the "Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve" specials. He returned as a co-host with Ryan Seacrest on December 31, 2005.

Clark agonized each year over whether to continue appearing on the annual show because of limitations on his speech from the stroke, U.S. Rep. David Dreier, a longtime friend, told CNN Wednesday.

Clark's "American Bandstand" work, which he began when it was a local TV show in Philadelphia in 1956, earned him the nickname "America's oldest living teenager."

The dance show was picked up by ABC and broadcast nationally a year later.

The savvy entrepreneur was a pioneer in introducing African-American and other performers to millions of young TV viewers. His audiences were integrated, among the first on television.

Clark became wealthy as a businessman, producing successful TV shows through Dick Clark Productions. He created the American Music Awards in the 1970s, a competitor to the Grammy Awards.

He sold the company to Washington Redskins owner Daniel Snyder in 2007.

Born Richard Wagstaff Clark in Mount Vernon, New York, on November 30, 1929, he began his broadcast career working at a radio station managed by his father.

Clark, who was married three times, is survived by his wife, Kari, two sons and a daughter.

The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame inducted Clark in its non-performer category in 1993.

Clark also hosted numerous other television favorites, including the "Pyramid" game shows and "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes."

Waterfront's third annual River Walk

Friends of the Waterfront Louisville's Waterfront Park has been lauded as one of the best examples of environmental redevelopment in the nation. Known as the "emerald heart of this city by the river," Waterfront Park is a place where employees of downtown businesses can take a moment out of a busy work day to rest and recharge. The Friends of the Waterfront (FOTW) invites everyone to support this jewel by the river and take a walk in the park during its third annual River Walk. The 2012 FOTW River Walk will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., May 18, 2012, at Waterfront Park.

This year's walk will start at the Big Four Bridge (red lot) and will incorporate a healthy lunch and ribbon cutting ceremony for the newest 3500 feet of walking paths that run through River Park Place- a new marina and mixed use community being developed by Poe Companies. We encourage companies to gather as many employees as they can to come out and participate.

The entry fee is $30 per person and includes a T-shirt and a healthy lunch. Family registration is available for $40 (includes one adult and up to two children 12 and under). Registration forms and more information can be found at www.friendsofthewaterfront.com. Registration fees can be paid by check (made out to Friends of the Waterfront) or on our website. Forms and fees (if paying by check) should be mailed to: Friends of the Waterfront, River Walk, 2012, 129 E. River Rd. Louisville, KY 40202. Please designate on your form if you paid on line via paypal. Registration is due by April 27th. Late registration available until May 16th.

"The FOTW River Walk is a great opportunity for companies and their employees to advocate a healthy lifestyle while supporting a great cause," said Todd Toles, president of Friends of the Waterfront.

By participating in the FOTW River Walk, walkers are not only doing something healthy for themselves, but are supporting the programs, events, education, fund-raising and marketing efforts of the Friends of the Waterfront; events such as WFPK's Waterfront Wednesdays, Catfish Louie Kids Zone at the Waterfront Independence Festival, the Clean Team and JCPS Curriculum Guides.

The Friends of the Waterfront was founded in 1991 and is a volunteer organization focused on waterfront advocacy and development. The ultimate goal of the organization is to ensure the community's use and appreciation of the river.

LEGISLATIVE PERSPECTIVE ON KENTUCKY GENERAL ASSEMBLY WITH TOM MCKEE

Representative Tom McKee

Most legislative sessions are remembered for one or two key issues, and this year's will be recalled for passing one of the toughest budgets we have seen in our lifetime and for challenges involving the other two branches of government.

One of those challenges took place on Thursday last week, when the General Assembly was scheduled to finish its work on the state's road plan and enact a far-reaching plan to curb prescription drug abuse.

Although tentative deals were reached between House and Senate leaders, a disagreement the Senate leaders have with Governor Beshear kept the legislature from approving either of those bills.

Like you, I had hoped we would be done by now, but we have to have a viable road plan and an operating budget for the Transportation Cabinet, or literally billions of dollars of projects – including millions of dollars for our legislative district – cannot move forward, and other highway safety measures would be stopped as well.

We also need a strong plan to combat prescription drug abuse, which takes the lives of three Kentuckians a day on average. Many of our surrounding states, as well as others such as Florida, have taken strong steps in this area, and if we don't act, the epidemic we already have could become much worse.

As the legislature works this week to finalize these issues, it should not undercut the important work that has been done this year, beginning with the passage of a balanced budget that does not raise taxes or lay off teachers or workers. Other new laws will hopefully limit the production of meth and the sale of dangerous synthetic drugs. It will also be much tougher for thieves to sell stolen copper, and businesses will not lose a valuable federal tax credit that was at risk if we did not pass a plan to pay the interest on the loan the unemployment insurance fund had to obtain to cover benefits during the recession.

There were many other new laws this year that are noteworthy as well. I am especially proud that one I sponsored will now establish a permanent memorial for those brave Kentucky soldiers who died while fighting in Iraq and Afghanistan.

At a bill signing by Governor Beshear last week, veterans from Harrison County and Pendleton County's American Legion Post 109 were there to take part, as were many others interested in seeing this memorial move forward.

This law will create a new committee that will spend much of this year deciding where this memorial should be located, how it should be paid for and how it should look. There have been a little more than 110 Kentuckians who have died in these two countries, including 10 during Desert Storm in the early 1990's.

In addition to this legislation, veterans will also appreciate a new law that will recognize their military status on their driver's license. This will make it easier for them to prove their service in those instances where being a veteran makes them eligible for certain benefits.

In education matters, we authorized a study of middle school sports, which doesn't have a statewide governing body like high schools, and we also call for more training so coaches will be better educated about diagnosing and treating athletes who suffer a concussion or other head injury.

Special needs students who complete a modified curriculum will now be able to get an alternative high school diploma rather than a certificate, and superintendents will no longer be allowed to punish teachers by assigning them to alternative school.

In public safety matters, there will now be a "Blue Alert," which is similar to the well-known Amber Alerts that are issued when a child is missing. In this case, a Blue Alert will be called when a police officer is severely injured or killed. This will make the public immediately aware of what has happened, so that it can help find those responsible for the crime.

Some of the other new laws will do such things as:

- Help standardize local tax forms, so companies doing business in multiple communities will have an easier time paying these taxes;

- Let the Amish and others driving motorless vehicles on the highway use reflective tape rather than the reflective orange triangle to ensure other drivers see them; and

- Call on social workers to provide more helpful information to older foster children as they prepare to leave state care and transition into adulthood.

I want to thank those who have contacted me this legislative session, and I encourage you to continue letting me know your thoughts or concerns about state government in the months ahead. I can always be reached by writing to Room 332B, Capitol Annex, 702 Capitol Avenue, Frankfort, KY 40601.

You can also leave a message for me or for any legislator at 800-372-7181. For those with a hearing impairment, the number is 800-896-0305.

I hope to hear from you soon.

KENTUCKY SENATOR KATIE KRATZ STINE REVIEWS STATE CONGRESSIONAL WEEK

State Senator Katie Stine

Despite our good faith efforts, the General Assembly finds itself unnecessarily called back to Frankfort by the governor for an extraordinary session over the lack of funding for the road plan. Following the process outlined in KRS 48.300 and consulting with the governor's transportation secretary, the House and Senate developed the road plan and its companion funding bill. Both chambers passed the road plan in an overwhelmingly bipartisan manner and sent it to the governor for his signature. On the last day of the regular session, the governor himself called the road plan "acceptable" and with no objections raised, both the House and the Senate patiently waited for him to sign it. He refused and instead called the General Assembly back for a special session.

Apparently, the governor wanted us to pass the funding bill but not wait to see the road plan signed and thereby allow him to veto the plan (he cannot line-item veto according to Section 88 of the Kentucky Constitution) while still keeping the money. To do so would have provided the governor with a $4 billion blank check to spend as he pleased and would have shirked our responsibility as a co-equal branch of government.

The governor has yet to tell the General Assembly what he plans to do with the road plan. In the best interest of all Kentucky, the governor needs to make a decision. If he signs the road plan, the funding bill is ready to go. If he vetoes the road plan, then the General Assembly can pass a new one. The choice (and the responsibility) is the governor's.

DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY FEDERAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AGENCY

Proposed Flood Hazard Determinations for Pendleton County, KY

The Department of Homeland Security's Federal Emergency Management Agency has issued a preliminary Flood Insurance Rate Map (FIRM), and where applicable, Flood Insurance Study (FIS) report, reflecting proposed flood hazard determinations within Pendleton County, KY (10-04-7845S). These flood hazard determinations may include the addition or modification of Base Flood Elevations (BFEs), base flood depths, Special Flood Hazard Area boundaries or zone designations, or the regulatory floodway. Technical information or comments are solicited on the proposed flood hazard determinations shown on the preliminary FIS report and/or FIRM for Pendleton County, KY (10-04-7845S). These flood hazard determinations are the basis for the floodplain management measures that your community is required to either adopt or show evidence of being already in effect in order to qualify or remain qualified for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program. However, before these determinations are effective for floodplain management purposes, you will be provided an opportunity to appeal the proposed information. For information on the statutory 90 day period provided for appeals, as well as a complete listing of the communities affected and the locations where copies of the FIRM are available for review, please visit FEMA's website at <http://www.fema.gov/plan/prevent/fhm/bfe>, or call the FEMA Map Information eXchange (FMIX) toll free at 1-877-FEMA-MAP (1-877-336-2627).

Governor Beshear takes action on six- year road plan

After reviewing nearly 400 pages of road project legislation, Governor Steve Beshear today exercised his line-item veto authority, returning some projects to their original funding sources in order to restore fairness and equity to the Road Plan legislation.

Today's action on the Road Plan also eliminates the Senate's single stated reason for not passing the Transportation budget.

Last Thursday, the final day of the regular session, Sen. Williams refused to pass the two-year Transportation budget unless the Governor signed the Road Plan immediately – despite the fact that the bill had been significantly changed and only four hours remained before the session ended. Gov. Beshear would not sign the bill without properly reviewing it; the state Constitution provides up to ten days for the Governor to review and take action on any bill.

"I will not ignore the due diligence I owe our citizens to review legislation, and in this case, I'm particularly glad we combed through the bill," said Gov. Beshear. "Our review of the Road Plan legislation over the last few days revealed that Sen. Williams took extraordinary steps to enrich his district at the expense of other priority projects in the state."

Road Plan projects to be based on need, not politics.

The Road Plan is comprised of two documents – a two-year project list, and a plan for the following four years. The Governor's recommended Six-Year Road Plan, submitted in January, is based on the priorities determined by engineers in the Transportation Cabinet -- projects that improve safety, ease traffic flow for employers and citizens, or provide critical road maintenance. Kentucky's economy depends on a stable, safe transportation system to support commerce.

The Road Plan has two basic groups of projects: those for which funds are available, and those which can be built only if additional funds become available.

The Governor's original Road Plan recommendation funded $99.9 million in the first two years and an additional $26.4 million in the so-called "out years" for road projects in Sen. Williams district. This is a total of $126.3 million over the next six years for road projects that Transportation engineers considered essential for the communities in Sen. Williams' district. An additional $199 million in projects were approved but left unfunded – meaning that if additional money were to become available, these projects would be eligible to use that new money.

Almost every Senator and Representative in the General Assembly had a similar mix of funded and unfunded projects. However, late in the session, Sen. Williams made significant changes to the funding sources for projects in his district.

In the final plan approved by the legislature, Sen. Williams guaranteed that every single road project in his district would be fully funded. He shifted his unfunded projects to funded ones – adding $152 million in project costs to his district over the next six years.

That maneuver has the effect of crowding out $152 million of projects in other areas of the state -- projects that are considered priorities from a transportation and engineering point of view.

"Sen. Williams has essentially moved all his district's road projects to the front of the line, forcing other projects that the Transportation Cabinet and other legislators considered high-priority to wait until additional funding becomes available. It's unfair to the citizens, and it's unfair to the rest of the lawmakers whose districts will suffer," said Gov. Beshear.

Line-Item Vetoes Restore Balance to Road Plan Gov. Beshear's line-item vetoes on HB 267, the two-year Road Plan document, restore all of Sen. Williams' road projects to the funding status originally recommended in the Governor's Road Plan. Each project the Governor had recommended funding in Sen. Williams' district in the next two years – all $99.9 million – will remain intact and funded.

However, the remaining $49.7 million in projects that leveraged taxpayer money from projects in other parts of Kentucky over the next two years will go back to their original, unfunded state.

These actions are not punitive against the citizens of Sen. Williams' district. Instead, the road projects have been restored to their original priority level, so they're evaluated based on their need, not on political maneuvers.

Action on Road Plan Clears Way for Session to Conclude Friday.

As recently as this morning, Senate leaders indicated that as soon as the Governor took action on the Road Plan, they would pass the Transportation budget, which would complete the legislative action required to keep the Transportation Cabinet operational.

On Wednesday morning, the House passed the Transportation budget bill and the prescription drug abuse bill, and those bills await action by the Senate.

"Some people have used the Road Plan as an excuse to hold up action on other needed legislation. While I don't agree with that argument, now that I have acted on the Road Plan, that excuse for inaction is eliminated," said Gov. Beshear. "The House has again met its obligations by passing the Transportation budget this morning, there is no reason for the Senate to delay passing that budget and the prescription drug bill right away and end this costly special session on Friday."

Ky. House passes landmark bill to limit drug abuse

With the goal of stopping prescription drug abuse in Kentucky, the House of Representatives voted overwhelmingly today for Speaker Greg Stumbo's House Bill 1.

The legislation, one of two issues being considered in the special legislative session, is largely similar to what the chamber passed earlier this year during the regular session, which ended April 12. It has the strong backing of law enforcement, prosecutors, city and county officials and the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, all of whom testified in support of the bill yesterday before it was approved by the House Judiciary Committee. Governor Beshear, Attorney General Jack Conway and the Judiciary Committee's chairman, Rep. John Tilley, have also been key supporters.

"All of us feel it is imperative to return to our original proposal as much as possible, after efforts to reach a compromise with the Senate in the regular session's final hours were hindered by the Kentucky Medical Association's lobbyists," said Speaker Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg. "The result then was legislation too weak for the scale of the problem we are facing. It would have left us with a system less effective than what we already have."

"If enacted, House Bill 1 will be another major step forward in the state's push to limit drug abuse on all fronts," said Chairman Tilley, D-Hopkinsville, who presented the bill on the House floor. "We just passed two new laws targeting synthetic drugs and meth; we need to add this as well. Lives literally are at stake."

The hallmark of House Bill 1 is moving KASPER, the state's prescription drug monitoring system, from the Cabinet for Health and Family Services to the Attorney General's office.

In addition, all physicians who prescribe controlled substances would be required to register – only about a third does now – and they could pay a maximum $50 annual fee to help cover costs if other revenue sources are insufficient. They would then consult KASPER reports to ensure that patients are taking their medicine safely and appropriately. Doctors would use KASPER to confirm that patients are suitable candidates to receive potentially addictive drugs. The bill also calls for periodic KASPER checks on patients requiring long-term use of Schedule II and III drugs, which include such medicine as OxyContin. This requirement would exclude such situations as hospice and emergency care.

Speaker Stumbo noted that a 2010 survey found that nearly 90 percent of physicians who use KASPER say its reports caused them to change what they had originally planned to prescribe. The Kentucky Board of Medical Licensure, meanwhile, already recommends doctors take this step with every patient.

In an attempt to close down illegitimate pain clinics, Speaker Stumbo's bill would require those in this field to be owned by a physician licensed in Kentucky, and the physician would have to be on the premises treating patients at least half of the time. The pain clinics would also be required to accept health insurance as a form of payment instead of just accepting cash. Together, these changes would keep the fly-by-night owners from setting up shop quickly in a community and replacing doctors who may get in trouble with the law.

All prescribers of controlled substances, meanwhile, could not dispense more than a 48-hour supply of this medicine from their offices. This provision has been especially effective in such states as Florida, which had seen in-office dispensing skyrocket.

House Bill 1 also includes several provisions designed to increase medical oversight of prescription drugs and greater cooperation among licensing boards and law enforcement.

It calls on physician and nursing licensing boards to set standards on proper prescribing and dispensing practices, and to bar prescribing by anyone convicted of drug felonies, either here or in another state. These boards would also set regulations on how to handle complaints – which would no longer have to be publicly sworn and notarized – and decide how to suspend licenses when public or patient health is in immediate danger. In addition, the boards would include paid and addiction specialists, and the boards would have to establish continuing-education requirements on addiction and pain management.

For law enforcement, House Bill 1 would allow county and commonwealth's attorneys to have access to KASPER if they are conducting an official investigation. The Attorney General, the licensing boards and the Kentucky State Police also would work more closely to target prescription drug abuse.

Other aspects of the bill call on Medicaid officials to monitor the prescribing practices of doctors treating those enrolled in the healthcare program, and coroners would be called upon to report drug overdoses and deaths to the State Registrar of Vital Statistics and Kentucky State Police. This will be designed to protect individual privacy while giving the public a much clearer picture of the number of those dying. Speaker Stumbo said he suspected it is three to five times higher than the nearly 1,000 deaths now being reported annually.

"This bill will go a long way to putting a stop to a problem that has taken so many of our citizens and left a void in so many families," Speaker Stumbo said. "We cannot afford to ignore it any longer."

The bill now heads to the state Senate for its consideration.

South Carolina firm recalls frozen entrees due to mislabeling and an undeclared allergen

Nestlé Prepared Foods Company, a Gaffney, S.C. establishment, is recalling approximately 16,890 pounds of Stouffer's lasagna frozen entrées that may instead contain stuffed peppers, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) announced today. The stuffed peppers contain Worcestershire sauce made with anchovies, a known allergen that is not declared on the lasagna labels.

The following products are subject to recall:

- 19 1/8-oz (542-g) cartons of "Stouffer's Lasagna Italiano" with a "best before" date of "JAN 2014"
- Shipping cases of "Stouffers

DS STFD Peppers," each containing 12 cartons that may be labeled with "Stouffer's Lasagna Italiano"

Each carton and case bears the establishment number "EST. 7991." The cartons and cases also bear the package code "1349595513R" or "1349595513S." No other package codes are affected by this recall. Additionally, each 19 1/8-oz. carton contains an identifying retail UPC code "13800 44709." The products subject to recall were produced on Dec. 15, 2011, and were shipped to retail establishments east of the Mississippi River.

The problem was brought to the company's attention by two consumer complaints. The problem may have occurred when the lasagna packaging materials remained in the packaging machinery when the company began packaging stuffed pepper entrées. FSIS and the company have received no reports of adverse reactions associated with consumption of these products. Individuals concerned about a reaction should contact a healthcare provider.

FSIS routinely conducts recall effectiveness checks to verify that recalling firms notify their customers of the recall and to ensure that steps are taken to make certain that the product is no longer available to consumers.

Consumers with questions about the recall should call Nestlé Consumer Services at 1-800-392-4057. Media with questions regarding the recall should contact Roz O'Hearn, Manager, Nestlé Division and Brand Affairs, at (440) 264-5170.

Consumers with food safety questions can "Ask Karen," the FSIS virtual representative available 24 hours a day at AskKaren.gov or via smartphone at m.askkaren.gov. "Ask Karen" live chat services are available Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. ET. The toll-free USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline 1-888-MPHotline (1-888-674-6854) is available in English and Spanish and can be reached from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. (Eastern Time)

Monday through Friday. Recorded food safety messages are available 24 hours a day.

FEMA letters may ask for follow-up

Kentucky residents who applied for disaster assistance with the Federal Emergency Management Agency as a result of the Feb. 29 - March 3 tornadoes have received or will receive letters about the progress of their application, what to do next or how they should spend grant money.

When an applicant for disaster assistance receives a letter from FEMA it is very important the letter be read carefully.

If applicants have questions about a letter they receive from FEMA, they should call the FEMA helpline at 800-621-3362 or key into m.fema.gov with a smartphone or tablet. Those who use 711 or Video Relay Service should call 800-621-3362 (TTY at 800-462-7585).

Applicants should not be discouraged if they receive a letter indicating they are ineligible. FEMA may simply need additional information or documentation.

Federal law prevents FEMA from duplicating assistance from insurance benefits or other government sources but FEMA's initial determination of ineligibility may change if private insurance or other government assistance is not sufficient to cover all eligible damage.

FEMA looks at a number of factors to determine an applicant's eligibility for disaster assistance. The agency must be able to verify:

An applicant's identity. If the applicant lost an ID during the storm, disaster recovery staff can make referrals regarding replacement documents.

Damages: If the applicant believes the inspector didn't see all of their damages, they can call the FEMA helpline at 800-621-3362.

Home occupancy: Applicants need to provide proof of occupancy, such as a utility bill. They can bring the bill, or other documents that prove occupancy to a disaster recovery center, where recovery specialists will help them.

If survivors receive an SBA loan application as part of their registration package it is very important to fill out the application and return it. Completion of the SBA application does not mean the applicant is required to take out an SBA loan. Information in the application is used to determine possible qualification for further FEMA disaster assistance.

The SBA application must be completed and returned by May 7.

Survivors may also receive a determination letter from FEMA about their eligibility if they missed an appointment with an inspector.

It is crucial an applicant stay in touch with FEMA and update contact information by calling the FEMA help line.

Leadership Institute seeks participants

The Carol Ann & Ralph V. Haile, Jr./US Bank Foundation, Toyota, State Farm Insurance and Duke Energy have awarded the Prichard Committee a grant to support a Northern Kentucky session of the Commonwealth Institute for Parent Leadership (CIPL).

The institute will be conducted Sept. 7-8, Sept. 28-29, and Nov. 2-3 in Florence, Ky. The cost of the program – instruction, supplies, meals and lodging – is covered by the grant.

The Commonwealth Institute for Parent Leadership prepares parents to work toward higher achievement for all public school students. The institute's curriculum focuses on leadership skills, planning and strategic development as well as elements of Kentucky's education and accountability systems. Over 1600 Kentucky parents have now completed this training and returned to work as partners in their districts and schools. After completing the institute, parents work with educators and other parents on projects targeting specific areas of student achievement.

Applications are now being accepted from parents in the following eleven Kentucky counties: Boone, Bracken, Campbell, Carroll, Gallatin, Grant, Kenton, Mason, Owen, Pendleton and Robertson. The deadline for applications is April 27, 2012.

The CIPL class size is limited to 30 parents. To apply or receive more information, visit www.cipl.org or call April Roberts-Traywick at 859-640-8936. CIPL, entering its sixteenth year of nationally acclaimed parent leadership training, is an arm of the Prichard Committee.

The Prichard Committee for Academic Excellence is a non-profit citizens' organization that works to improve education for all Kentuckians.

SMS Community Connection Program correction

For the past four years Sharp Middle School has hosted The Pendleton County Community Connection program. This program was developed to help educate the public regarding available assistance to help the financially distressed families here.

There are many organizations in Pendleton County that offer services to residents that they might not be aware of. This is how the idea of such an event as the Pendleton County Community Connections program was born.

The program helps educate residents about the many different agencies in the county that might be able to help in some way and what their services are.

Take a stand to stop teen drinking

Too many teens are still drinking. Where do they get the alcohol? A U.S. government survey shows that most of them do not pay for it. Instead, they get it from older friends, from family members, at parties, or they take it from their home, or someone else's, without permission. Our local high school students report that they are drinking at a friend's house, more than any other location.

Most adults support the legal drinking age. In fact, only 9% of American adults think that it is ok for adults to provide alcohol to underage youth.

Four Pendleton County High School senior students applied for a grant through North Key taking a strong stand on underage drinking. Their grant funding has paid for this billboard located on US 27 across from the high school.

The youth hope that you will do your part. They have worked with local law enforcement to provide a simple, anonymous, way for you to report underage drinking. The only way we can "Take a Stand" and make a difference is to report activity to local law enforcement that you know is happening.

As prom and graduation season is upon us, help them make sure our youth and their friends are safe. They suggest that parents keep track of alcohol at home and speak up when underage drinking is discussed. Be frank and tell other parents that you don't want them serving alcohol to teens or condoning teen drinking. Talk to adults who host teen parties. Let them know that it is not OK to serve alcohol to someone else's teen. If that does not work, please use the tip line located at pendletonsheriffptipline.ky.gov and let local law enforcement know that our kids are in danger. It could be the act that saves a life.

Ladycats beat St. Pat for first win of season

By Sam McClanahan, Reporter
A busy schedule last week that saw the Ladycats softball team play in four consecutive days was highlighted with the team's first victory of the season, a 7-6 thriller against St. Pat last Thursday. The Lady Saints throughout the ballgame, but the 'Cats made a late rally to nod the contest at five apiece after six innings. Pendleton County would go on to add two more runs in the top of the seventh, and junior starting pitcher, Samantha Smith, worked her way out of a jam to strike out the games final batter to preserve a one-run win. Smith hurled a complete-game, striking out seven batters. "It's a great feeling to get that first win under our belt," commented head coach Kirt Prather. "We gave a total team effort, and showed a lot of fight coming back in the late innings." Samantha Smith helped her own cause in the batter's box, as she collected a pair of hits including a double and drove in two runs. Sophomore Sarah Turner doubled and tripled, while driving in two runs herself, and sophomore Destiny Shackelford collected two singles and one RBI. Earlier in the week, the Ladycats dropped back-to-back games in identical fashion, falling 15-0 to Harrison County last Tuesday, and likewise to Nicholas County last Wednesday. The week concluded on Friday with a loss at Bryan Station. This week, the Ladycats have three scheduled games that will all be contested on the road. On Monday, at Mason County at 5:30 p.m., Thursday at Silver Grove at 5:30 p.m., and will wrap up the week with an 8 p.m. game at Bath County.

Wildcats baseball team beats district-rival Nicholas County

In 2006, the KHSAA realigned districts throughout the state and the 38th District was not spared from it. Gone was Brossart, Campbell County, Silver Grove and Scott High and in was Deming, Nicholas County and Harrison County. The Cats dominated Nicholas County 9-0 in that first year's district tournament and everything seemed rosy for the Cats. But Nicholas has made it anything but a flower garden for the Cats as they have been knocked out of the district tournament in the first round in the past five seasons and denied a spot in the 10th Region tournament by the Blue Jackets.

This season, PC is trying to set a different tone and send the message that no more will Nicholas County hold an edge over Pendleton County. First message, considered sent.

The Cats though battled the Blue Jackets and pulled out a 3-2 victory in Varsity action. But that was not the only level, the Cats sent a message as the JV/Freshmen team had three matchups this week with Nicholas. They won the only full five inning game, tied at 1-1 after two innings in another and lost a middle school/freshmen game.

"We did the little things to win the game," coach Josh Hamm pointed out after the varsity game. "We put the ball in play and took advantage of opportunities. I know it's cliché but it's the truth. We beat them without our starters."

Dustin Wanner (leadoff and starting outfielder), Brent Jacob (bats second and starting center fielder) and Jared Rering (starting pitcher) were on the Senior Trip and missed the game.

Nicholas took a 1-0 lead on starting pitcher, Freshmen Josh Brown. After a single, a fielder's choice and a grounder to third, a double to LC scored the first run.

The Cats would have their chances but couldn't get the breakthrough play through the first three innings. Freshmen Hunter Lea led the game off for the Cats with a walk and advanced on a sacrifice but he would be stranded.

Second inning junior Tyler Daugherty was hit by a pitch and senior Ronnie Turner was walked. But both were left stranded.

Third inning saw Hunter lead off with another walk, freshmen Mack Ramsey and senior Evan Spicer walked to load the bases with one out. But two strikeouts would leave a zero on the Cats side of the scoreboard.

"We overcame our mistakes and that is big. We didn't dwell on them but overcame them," coach Hamm said about the Cats in the victory even though they stranded six runners in the first three innings.

The fourth inning was the breakthrough inning and it was small ball at it's finest. Nine batters came to the plate, three runs scored and not nary a ball went past the pitcher.

With a Nicholas pitcher that threw hard but struggled with control, the Cats were patient. Ronnie Turner led off the rally by working the count and then being hit by a pitch. Junior Mahlon White walked and Josh Brown pushed a bunt for a base hit. Hunter picked up his third walk of the game to push across the tying run.

After a ground out back to the pitcher by Trevor Turner in which another run scored to make the lead 2-1, Evan Spicer was hit by a pitch to reload the bases, Seth Courtney walked to force in the third run of the inning for the Cats.

Josh had control of the game and held Nicholas County to that single run in the second through six innings.

Tyler Daugherty came in to close it in the seventh but the first batter reached on an error. After a walk and a strikeout, a grounder to short erased one runner but the throw to first skipped past allowing the run to score and cutting the lead to 3-2. With the tying run at third after a steal, Tyler blew a fastball past the Blue Jacket batter to seal the victory.

As darkness started coming on, the JV were only able to finish two innings and the score at 1-1. Kenton Hornbeck led off with single, stole second, advanced to third on a passed ball and came home when Robbie Gaskin hit behind the runner.

Thursday, the JV Cats traveled to Carlisle for a JV/Freshmen DH. Freshmen Jonah Smith was on the mound and pitched all five innings allowing one earned run, seven hits, striking out four and walking none to pick up the 7-5 victory.

Sophomore Trevor Turner has proven to be a valuable and versatile player for varsity coach Josh Hamm. While catching in this game with Brossart, he has also started at second base and played both left field against Nicholas County, and right field versus Walton Verona, this past week. His good defensive skills while having quality at bats has been a key for the Wildcats this season.

But it was a come-from-behind victory in a tense battle between the future varsity players.

Both teams got two runners on in the first but neither could score.

Jacob Partin led off with a double in the second and advanced to third on a wild pitch. When a failed squeeze bunt was missed, Jacob stole home to give the Cats the 1-0 lead. Nicholas would responded with two in their half of the second on an error that allowed both runs.

The Cats took the lead back in the third when Kenton led off with a single, Robbie Gaskins singled behind him scoring Kenton. Mack walked and stole second. Josh drove in Robbie with a single and the Cats were back on top 3-2. Nicholas would tie it at three in the bottom half of the third and take the lead in the fourth with both runs being unearned.

The Cats would roar back in the fifth. Robbie Gaskins led off with his second hit of the game, Mack singled and Josh sacrificed both over one base. Jacob worked a walk to load the bases and JV coach Aaron Biddle called on

Special Olympics Area Spring Games Move to Union

The Special Olympics Kentucky Area 7 Spring Games will be held Saturday, April 28, at Ryle High School in Union. This is the first time the event will be held at Ryle after several years at Lloyd High School in Erlanger. The Area 7 meet includes more than 100 athletes from Boone, Campbell, Grant, Kenton and Pendleton counties. The event gets underway with Opening Ceremonies, including the parade of athletes, at 9:45 a.m. The competition begins at 10 a.m.

This is the second of three weekends of the Special Olympics Spring Games season, which concludes May 12 in Louisville. The Area Spring Games is one of eight regional track and field meets held statewide this year. In all, more than 1,500 athletes with intellectual disabilities throughout the state will participate in regional track and field competitions, making track and field the largest participation event in the Special Olympics program in Kentucky.

Participants in the Spring Games automatically qualify to compete in the Special Olympics Kentucky State Summer Games to be held June 1-3 at Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond.

For more information about the Area 7 Spring Games or about the Special Olympics track and field program, contact Special Olympics Kentucky Senior Program Director Kim Satterwhite at 800-633-7403 or via e-mail at satterwhite@soky.org.

Special Olympics is the world's largest program of sports training and competition for children and adults with intellectual disabilities. Participation in competitive events is open to all individuals eight years of age or older. Training and competition in local, area, state, and national programs is offered year-round in Kentucky in 16 sports. In addition to its traditional sports competitions, Special Olympics also offers early childhood programming through the Young Athletes Program and medical screenings through the Healthy Athletes Initiative. Special Olympics Kentucky has been changing the lives of people with intellectual disabilities in Kentucky for 42 years.

Tennis team defeats Grant County

By Bruce Reller, Jr., Reporter
The Pendleton County High School tennis team defeated Grant County in a home match last Thursday, April 19. Even though the Cats were missing most of their seniors, the tennis team performed really well.

In singles competition, Blake Scott, Eli Stahl, and Max Dewald were all 6-2 winners. Senior Kristen Stewart was a 6-3 winner and Michelle Franz won a close match 6-4.

As for doubles, Stewart and Beckah Heiert won a very close match against their Grant County opponents. The final score was 7-5 in the long match.

Pendleton County only got one match in due to rain last week. As for this week, they will host two teams. The Cats will play host to Bourbon County today at 4:45 p.m. They will also host Augusta this Thursday at 4:45 p.m.

PC will play a girls only match against Williamstown on the road this Wednesday as well. They will also play on the road against Bourbon County next Monday, April 30.

Better push back against the Jocks of Life

You know those guys that play on the football team that smash you into the lockers at recess?

The Jocks of Life? Of course you do. Is your only comeback that the popular jocks will become losers later in life—that they will become fat and bald, and that they won't be able to date the cheerleaders anymore?

Well, turns out you're wrong. According to a study by economists John M. Barron and Glen R. Waddell of Purdue University and Bradley T. Ewing of Texas Tech University, if you participate in a sports program in school, you are more likely to be more successful in life.

If you play sports as a kid, you will earn more money, stay in school longer, and participate more in your community.

Another study by Ewing found that athletes have a better edge over other classmates who were in band, theater or even student government council. When SAT scores, GPA's were equal, jocks seem to do better.

A 2006 study, "found that athletes are 15% more likely to be registered to vote, 14% more likely to watch the news, and 8% more likely to feel comfortable speaking in public (and, for public speaking, the effect on females is twice as large)."

The studies don't tell us why. Maybe it's because athletes seem to be team players. Maybe being part of a team, teaches them how to get along with others—which is a key skill for real life. Maybe, playing sports instills school spirit, which makes them stay in school. Or maybe school is as much about learning how to socialize as it is about academics—and sport teams provide that outlet.

Or maybe just maybe, our worst fears are true. Jocks succeed through intimidation.

Whatever the case, if someone pushes you into a locker . . . you may want to punch back. OK, we are only joking. But staying active now might be your ticket to success.

Denny Hamlin holds off Martin Truex to win at Kansas Speedway

It seemed as if Denny Hamlin was out for a Sunday afternoon drive at Kansas Speedway, hanging around the leaders most of the day but never really giving anybody too much reason to worry. Turned out that Hamlin was playing possum, just as he did at Phoenix earlier this year.

His team kept making adjustments on every stop and had his Toyota dialed in late in the race when Hamlin charged past Martin Truex Jr. for the lead. He then held off Truex's last-ditch move with two laps remaining to win for the second time this season.

"It felt a lot like Phoenix in the sense of we kind of hung around the top five all day," said Hamlin, whose best finish at Kansas had been third last year.

"At the end we just kind of make our charge, make our run, and there were some things that had to happen the last run really for us to work out, and those things happened."

The victory gave him Joe Gibbs Racing team some momentum heading to Richmond, where the Virginia driver has won twice before - and where he certainly won't sneak up on anybody.

"We've had good cars, we got the win at Phoenix, and we've had consistent good performances," crew chief Darian Grubb said. "All these details are starting to add up."

Jimmie Johnson was third for Hendrick Motorsports, which has failed in 14 tries to win the team's milestone 200th race. Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Kasey Kahne also finished in the top 10.

Long green-flag runs on Sunday gave Hamlin the chance to sit back and watch as the race unfolded, never pressing for the lead until it mattered. When that happened, his team had made enough right decisions that he powered to the front as the sun finally broke through.

Truex dominated most of the afternoon, leading a race-high 173 laps, but had to settle for second place. It was his third top-five finish of the season, but he's yet to win in 175 races.

Truex said his final set of tires cost him. He was the loosest he'd been all race.

"I guess if we can be this frustrated with second, it tells you how close we are as a team," said Truex, who hasn't won since Dover in 2007.

Matt Kenseth finished fourth despite having a wild afternoon trying to get into the pits, often sliding across the line at the start of pit road. Greg Biffle followed up his victory last week at Texas with a fifth-place run, though he didn't have the car to contend at Kansas.

"It was a tough day," Biffle said. "We were back and forth all day, and we were off just a bit." Kevin Harvick was sixth, followed by Earnhardt and Kahne, giving Hendrick Motorsports at least three cars in the top-10 for the second straight week.

The 14-race drought for Hendrick is its longest since going 15 races without a win during the 2002 and '03 seasons. The streak began after Johnson's win last October at Kansas.

"The pressure will continue to mount on the four-car team, though. And when Johnson was asked whether he'll be relieved when someone gets the win, his reply came through unvarnished: "More than you could ever imagine," he said.

“Sadly, Kentuckians are killed every year while working to make our roadways safe,” Transportation Secretary Mike Hancock said. “They are not statistics. These are someone’s parents or children. We hope our message – voiced by children of our own employees – will encourage drivers to think about the consequences of speeding and not paying attention in a work zones.”

Work zones involve more than highway crews. They also involve utility crews, mowing contractors, brush cutters and tree trimmers, to name a few. Eighty-five percent of those killed in work zones are not the workers but motorists. “That indicates a deadly lack of attention to the road ahead,” said Bill Bell, director of the Kentucky Office of Highway Safety.

The Transportation Cabinet will invest in hundreds of highway projects again this year. Traditionally, the highway construction season kicks off in April. Cabinet engineers and contractors work cooperatively to design projects and work schedules that minimize delays and crashes.

“Work zone safety concerns all of us,” Bell said. “Every driver has a role to play in keeping our roadways safe. By working together, we can end the needless loss of life in highway work zones.”
The cabinet asks motorists to practice 10 work zone safety tips:
• Expect the unexpected.
• Slow down.
• Don’t tailgate. Keep a safe distance between vehicles.

• Keep a safe distance from workers and equipment.
• Pay attention to signs.
• Obey road crew flaggers.
Stay alert and minimize distractions.
• Keep up with the traffic flow.
• Schedule enough time and call 511 or go to www.511.ky.gov for Kentucky traffic and travel information.
• Be patient and stay calm.

KSP Posts across the state.
KSP Commissioner Rodney Brewer encouraged citizens to take advantage of this opportunity to rid their home of expired or unwanted prescription medications.
“Prescription Drug abuse is the Nation’s fastest-growing drug problem and Kentucky has been identified as a hot spot for this type of activity,” said Brewer.

“The unique aspect of this initiative is that it is free and anonymous. No requests for identification will be made to anyone bringing medications in to KSP Posts,” added Brewer.
Lt. David Jude, spokesperson for KSP, advised that the program is designed to be easy for citizens and offered the following tips for those interested in participating:

• Participants may dispose of medication in its original container or by removing the medication from its container and disposing of it directly into the disposal box.
• All solid dosage pharmaceutical product and liquids in consumer containers may be accepted. Liquid products, such as cough syrup, should remain sealed in their original container. The depositor should ensure that the cap is tightly sealed to prevent leakage.
• Intra-venous solutions, injectibles, and syringes will not be accepted due to potential hazard posed by blood-borne pathogens.
• Illicit substances such as marijuana or methamphetamine are not a part of this initiative and should not be placed in collection containers.
• “This effort symbolizes KSP’s commitment to halting the disturbing rise in addiction caused by the misuse and abuse of unwanted prescription drugs and serves as another means of keeping drugs out of the hands of our young people,” added Jude.
• Jude advised that all KSP Post locations and contact numbers can be found on the agency website at www.kentuckystate-police.org or by calling 502.782.1780.

CONSERVATION DISTRICT AWARDS

Pendleton County Conservation District holds the 2012 awards banquet

The Pendleton County Conservation District held their annual awards banquet on Friday, March 30 in the Farm Bureau Banquet Hall/400 Main Street, Falmouth. Approximately 115 people were in attendance as we recognized and honored the students, teachers and other outstanding leaders. A delicious meal was served by Davidson's Catering Service of Hammersville, Ohio.

The annual Conservation Art and Writing Contests are sponsored by the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation, local Farm Bureau Insurance, Kentucky

Association of Conservation Districts and the Pendleton County Conservation District with cooperation of the Pendleton County schools. This is a statewide contest and local winners compete for area and state awards also.

The topic of the 2011-2012 contest was "Where Kentucky Wild Things Are." We had 784 art entries and 458 writing entries in our county schools this year. A total of 48 plus teachers and school leaders participated to make the contests a success.

School Personnel

Will Browning, chairperson of the Pendleton Conservation District, served as master of ceremonies. Other supervisors: Chris Robles, Robert P. McClanahan, Robert M. Jones, Edwin A. Monroe III, Gregory L. Wolfe and Larry Miller moved the program along throughout the evening. Kay Williams, district administrative secretary, was the program coordinator. Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) personnel helping were: Georganne Wiltse, Richard Bowling, Mitch Esham and Kenny Copes. The contest winners, parents and school personnel were the honored guests.

Special guests recognized were: Henry and Janice Bertram, Bobby Fogle, Robert E. McClanahan, John Merrill and Anthony Strong.

The Conservation District gave each school a $1,000 grant for projects of their choice that will encourage students to be good stewards of the land. We use it but we must also protect and conserve our natural resources. One school will give the program to our annual awards banquet each year and explain what they used their grant for Southern Elementary School, Maxie Kordes gave an interesting recap of their activities.

We thank and appreciate all the teachers and personnel that participated and supported our contest and other conservation efforts in their schools. Those that were able to attend our banquet are pictured in this article. School contest coordinators are: Maxie Kordes for Southern Elementary School, Teri Zeigler for Pendleton County High School, Cayeann Cowan for Phillip Sharp Middle School and Amy Hurst for Northern Elementary School. Those were given a special thank you gift. All teachers were given a certificate and lapel pin from the Conservation District.

There were a total of 30 awards given. All winners received cash awards, certificates and T-shirts from the Conservation District, citations from State Representative Tom McKee and certificates from State Senator, President Pro-Tem Katie Stine. The first place winners of the art contests and the writing contests in the county will receive a congratulatory letter and check for $25 from the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation.

The Conservation District would like to congratulate all the conserving natural resources for our future

winners and say thank you to the parents, teachers and friends for making our program a success. Also, thank you to The Falmouth Outlook for publishing all our articles and supporting our programs throughout the years. All programs and services are offered on a non-discriminatory basis without regard to race, color, national origin, sex, religion, age, disability, political beliefs and marital or familial status.
